Mr. Ford will work on projects in support of the governments of Rwanda and Tanzania. He will assist senior officials, up to and including the presidents of the two countries, during their visits to the United States by introducing them to appropriately senior U.S. officials at the federal, state, or local levels, advising them on the policies of the United States with respect to issues of concern to them, and suggesting ways of advancing their interests and telling their stories more effectively -- both within official circles in the United States and to the public at large. He may also introduce key personnel from the respective public and private sectors to members of the U.S. business community with a view to encouraging U.S. trade with, and investment in, Rwanda and Tanzania. He may on occasion assist in drafting op-ed articles or speeches about the countries, or address relevant groups, including the Rwandan and Tanzanian expatriate communities in the United States. Finally, he may from time to time help to host social events at which representatives of the countries will have the opportunity to meet and interact with interested American counterparts.
